CHENNAI: With an aim to facilitate sharing of knowledge on disaster recovery, outsourcing and new technologies among the chief Information Officers of various IT companies in the city, the IT heads of nearly 40 companies launched the CIO Klub recently.

The initiative would help the senior employees share insights learnt through experience, which would benefit the companies, customers and the individuals, said Jaganathan T., director (Technology) Ajuba Solutions and secretary of the club. It would offer the higher rung officials opportunities to discuss and seek solutions. The regular meetings would include talk by experts, and address the concerns of the individuals who deal with the security and technology constraints of IT companies. "Most of us have become CIOs by learning all the way. This way, we can contribute to a collective wisdom and give back to the community," said Anwar Bagdadi from the national council of the club. Bhoovaran Thirumalai, CEO, Aspiration Energy was the chief guest at the event.
